SINGER MACHINE No. 96-10

GEAR DRIVEN ROTARY HOOK
HIGH SPEED LOCK STITCH

FOR

MEDIUM AND HEAVY WEIGHT FABRICS

Machine No. 96-10

Machine No. 96-10 has a rotary hook driven by perfect gears of hardened steel, and is the latest and best developed high speed lock stitch sewing machine for use on medium and heavy weight fabrics.

This machine is satisfactorily used in the manufacture of a large variety of articles, including:

Cloaks	Knit Goods	Blankets
Uniforms	Cardigan Jackets	Upholstery
Overcoats	Leggins	Canvas Goods
Suits	Hunting Goods	Carriage Robes
Overalls	Bedding	Oiled Clothing, Etc.

Less power is required to drive this machine than any other similar machine in the market, a saving of twenty-five per cent. in power being effected by its use. This is made possible by the adoption of the improved smooth running gears.

In actual service the machine can be driven up to the high speed of 3200 stitches per minute according to the length of the stitch and the class of the work.

The stitch forming mechanism is accurate in its action on account of the hook having the positive gear drive, and as the machine is provided with efficient thread handling and tension devices, perfect stitches alike on both sides of fabrics are made.

Owing to the rotary system of construction and few bearings the wear of the machine is reduced to a minimum and the cost of maintenance is surprisingly low.

The bed of the machine is $18\frac{3}{4}$ inches long and $10\frac{1}{4}$ inches from needle to base of arm so that articles of large size can be easily handled.

In establishments where these machines are installed they are eminently successful, and are popular with operators as well as with manufacturers.
