SINGER MACHINE No. 21w180

COMPOUND FEED

FOR STITCHING MEDIUM WEIGHT FABRICS

Machine No. 21 w 180

Machine No. 21 w 180 has one needle and one sewing hook and makes the lock stitch.

It is used for stitching light and medium fabrics in the manufacture of articles of military and naval equipment such as haversacks, pack carriers, leggins, cartridge belts, canteen covers and pouches and carriers of all kinds. It is also used for binding operations and for reclamation work on such equipment and is well adapted for the lighter work in tent repairs.

This machine can be operated continuously up to the speed of 1800 stitches per minute, and at all speeds there is an entire absence of vibration owing to the care with which the machine is constructed.

It has an efficient compound feed which consists of a combination of drop feed and needle feed. After the needle has entered the fabric, the needle and feed, in unison, move the work forward so that the feeding is perfectly accomplished, and two or more plies of fabric will be flat when stitched and without a tendency to roll. The machine continues the stitching regardless of unevenness in fabrics.

This machine has always been reliable and is now further in demand because of its utility in stitching a great variety of war necessities made of medium weight fabrics.
